As you might expect, graduates of Flaget are living all across the nation. Each year I like to show you in which states they reside and exactly how many of the blue and white faithful are still active. On the table in the front of the room is a map indicating the number of graduates living in each state. To answer the query I receive most often of "there aren't many of us left are there?" Actually there may be more still active than most of you realize. As of January 1st, of the 4,190 Flaget graduates, 2,847 were still cheering for the blue and white. That figures out to 68%. True, there are fewer graduates left every month, but looking at the big picture, there are still a lot of braves out there.

Is there something about Flaget history that you always wanted to know? I get a lot of questions about Flaget, and to many of them I can find the answer. If there is something you always wanted to know, just ask, I will try my best to get you the answer. I get a good number of grads telling me that I should write about this or that. Sometimes there just is not enough information in the records to do so, but many times your suggestions result in some good stories. So if you have a suggestion for an article, please let me know.

I am pleased to announce that the Flaget Museum has been getting more visitors. If you have not been there please stop by. The comments from those who have visited have been gratifying. In conjunction, should you have any vintage Flaget items to donate, please bring them to a luncheon or drop them off at St. X. I can also pick items up if it is too difficult for you to get out. Thanks to Lowell Collard for his donations, this resulted in the museum coming closer to completing the full volume of "The Landmark". We are only missing a few issues and I know that one of you has one we need! Below is a list of the Landmarks the museum is missing. Can you help?
