As the Flaget family ages some members like to stay in the old neighborhood, while others want to move to warmer climates so those old bones don't ache so much. Each year I like to publish a map showing where Flaget graduates now reside. On the table in front of the room is a map showing how many Flaget graduates live in each state. It is no coincidence that very few graduates live in the cold northern states and those residing south of the Mason-Dixon Line outnumber their northern counterparts by about nine to one. You say you didn't pay attention during history class, well, the Mason-Dixon Line runs on the border between Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The median age of all living Flaget Graduates falls in the class of 1961, that would be about 74 years of age. Half of the Flaget graduates are older and half are younger. The life expectancy according to the government for men is about 78.8 years. This does not take into account health problems, race, or a nagging wife. So if you're beating the odds keep up the good work!

The Flaget museum is accepting vintage items for display. Since space is very limited items which were not used during the years of school operation cannot be displayed. Coats and sweaters although still accepted cannot be displayed also because of space limitations. Trophies and smaller items are actively sought as well as landmarks and sports programs. The museum is in need of a showcase. The case needs to be about waist high and four to six feet in length. Back opening doors are a must. Of course the price must be very reasonable. If you can help in this regard please contact the curator.
